The morning lecture will examine the intersection of Jungian principles and spiritual evolution, which Jung referred to as the process of individuation. We will explore how the Soul spurs us to grow through recognizing and dismantling our out-dated archetypes, and then calls us to re-balance by welcoming new and empowering archetypes. We will witness that synchronicity is one of the Soul's tools for guiding us along the alchemical path that She would have us walk. We will also discuss the nature of an imaginal field – that space between the conscious and the unconscious – where the Soul can reclaim its split-off parts, bring us back to balance, heal our inner and outer relationships, and direct our unique life's journey. The lecture will build the supporting structure for a safe, alchemical container that will hold an imaginal field for the afternoon workshop. Margaret McGill has taken a non-conventional path in developing her own unique practices. Starting at age of 21, for eight years she traveled as a missionary in Latin America, establishing rehabilitation centers for young adults with drug/alcohol problems, and raising funds through lectures, theatrical presentations, and TV/radio shows – along the way, she learned a great deal about compassion, determination, risk-taking and faith ... from a non-academic point-of-view. Returning to the US in 1978, she shortly thereafter began a decade-long educational journey which included a Licensed Practical Nursing degree in 1985, an Associates degree in 1987, and a Bachelor of Science in Communication in 1991. Among her many awards/accomplishments was being chosen to deliver the 1988 Keynote Speech to 500-plus women at the national convention of PEO (the women's charitable sorority), and selection as the 1991 Outstanding Student in Oral Interpretation and Performance Studies at Arizona State University. Margaret's business career has focused on health and education, and included working: with suicidal teenagers and adults at the Southwest Behavioral Institute; as a geriatrics activity coordinator specializing in Alzheimer patients; as Director of the Psychiatric Technicians Program for Apollo College; at Bryman College as the business leadership and communication instructor; and as a counselor at Arizona Behavioral Counseling Services, providing clients with court-ordered instruction in Domestic Violence, Anger Management and Substance Abuse. Margaret began her private practice, Emotional Transformations® LLC, in 1999, shortly after certification as a Grief Recovery Specialist. She draws on sources as varied as Jungian Principles and Spiritual Intuition, Alchemy and Dream-work, and music and meditation. From her lifetime experiences, Margaret has synthesized a form of inner exploration, which is the art of finding one's personal truths through emotional and spiritual self-discovery. In addition to the programs she offers through her private practice, Margaret has developed and taught Mesa Community College adult education courses in Emotional Transformation and Dream Interpretation (which was a big hit!).
