Student artwork from Mesa Community College is on display at the Wolfswinkel Education Center at the Phoenix Art Museum for the month of December.

The “Peterson Group Painters” display is at the Phoenix Art Museum at 1625 N. Central Ave. in Phoenix.

The works of five oil painting students – Kyle Mulcahy, Barbara Schild, Angelica Sepulveda (Tempe), Mike Bonar (Mesa) and James Withee (Mesa), are exhibited. The students worked under the direction of MCC instructor Cynthia Peterson, according to a press release.

Ms. Peterson said the participants are mostly advanced students who have studied with her since their beginning classes. They learn basic techniques by painting still life and studying historical painters, then move on to more advanced methods and individual ideas.

“I congratulate all the student artists who worked hard to take part in this opportunity,” Ms. Peterson said in a press release. “The students are encouraged to find their own voice and subject matter. Many of them are very interested in figurative/portrait painting and take inspiration from their own relationships.”

MCC student Angelica Sepulveda said her inspiration comes from the children in her life, including her two children and her nieces and nephews. Her work is on exhibit at the Tempe Library through Jan. 14, as well as at the Phoenix Art Museum.

“Kids are the best part of the world—they’re the future,” Ms. Sepulveda, 42, said in the release. “Their expressions inspire me. They may be sad or anxious, but there is still happiness.”
